Perceptions of human trafficking and modern slavery

A scourge on society
“evil”

The result of state practices that create environments in which exploitation can flourish

Human trafficking as ‘one of the darkest aspects of the dark side of globalisation’
(Heine and Thakur, 2011:13)

Globally, protection and support for children and young people who have experienced abuse, neglect and/or exploitation are particularly challenging areas of work (Radford et al., 2011; Radford et al., 2015; UNICEF, 2020)

Complex

Human trafficking: Two key sources of data

Summary of core data and indicators used in this edition of the Report

	2017	2018	2019	2020	2020 (or most recent)	Total 2017-2020
Number of detected victims reported	44,989	46,384	49,692	46,850	53,800	187,915

United Nations
Office on Drugs
and Crime
(UNODC)

The 2021 Global Estimates indicate there are 50 million people in situations of modern slavery on any given day, either forced to work against their will or in a marriage that they were forced into

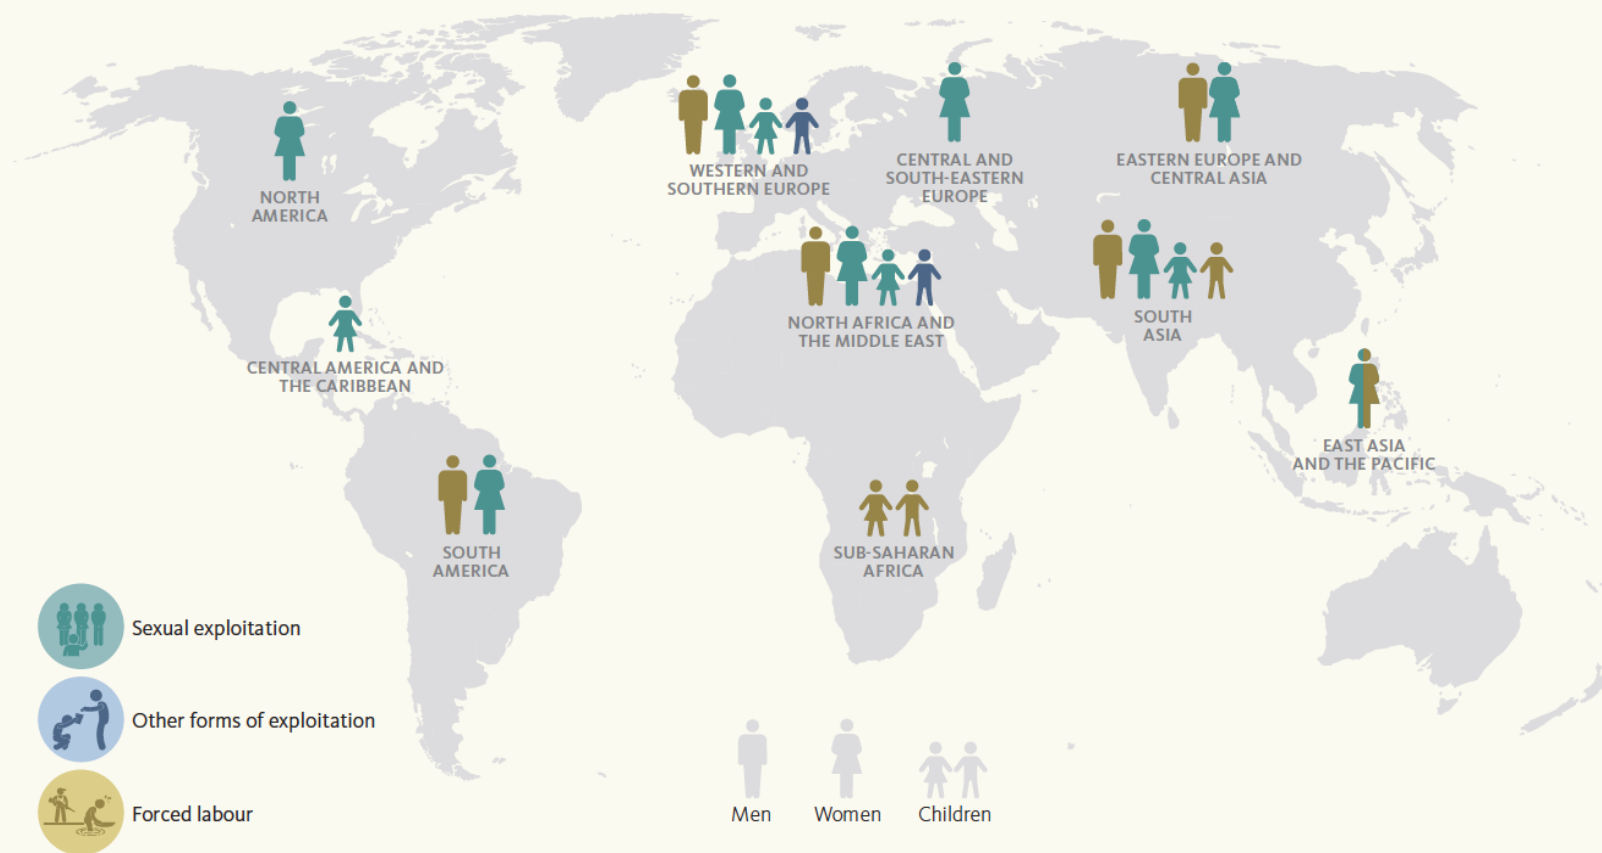

- Forced labour accounts for 27.6 million
- Forced marriage accounts for 22 million

WESTERN AND SOUTHERN EUROPE

- › In 2020, 22% increase in male victims detected compared to 2019.
- › A proportion of detected victims are trafficked to be exploited in criminal activity or mixed forms of trafficking.
- › Increased detection of domestic trafficking.
- › Decrease in prosecutions and convictions.

UNODC (2022) global findings

Finding 2 Trafficking for sexual exploitation less detected during the pandemic

Finding 3 Victims rely on “self-rescue” as anti-trafficking responses fall short

Finding 8 Boys and men account for a greater share of detected victims as new forms of exploitation emerge

Finding 9 Women and children suffer greater violence at the hands of traffickers

Finding 11 Women: more likely than men to be traffickers or more likely than men to be convicted?

Finding 3 Victims rely on “self-rescue” as anti-trafficking responses fall short

Discovery patterns for trafficking in persons cases (2012-2022)

Finding 8 Boys and men account for a greater share of detected victims as new forms of exploitation emerge

Trends in the profile of victims detected, 2004–2020

More male victims – both boys and men – have been detected in greater numbers over the past decade.

Increasing proportions of identified victims have been trafficked for the purpose of forced criminality and mixed forms of exploitation.

Finding 9 Women and children suffer greater violence at the hands of traffickers

Analysis of court cases shows that female victims are subjected to physical or extreme violence at the hands of traffickers at a rate three times higher than males, while children are subjected to physical or extreme violence at a rate almost two times higher than adults.

Finding 11 Women: more likely than men to be traffickers or more likely than men to be convicted?

Women investigated for trafficking in persons are significantly more likely to be convicted than men.

Member States to integrate training of the judiciary to examine trafficking in persons as a form of gender-based violence within the context of international women's rights frameworks, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Violence against Women (CEDAW).

Finding 6 War and conflict offer hunting grounds for traffickers

Past Research – Utilising IOMs Determinants of Migrant Vulnerability Model

Structural factors:
- Conditions and institutions that influence the overall environment
- Migration management practices

Individual factors:

- Education and Skills
- Socio-economic status
- Employment status
- Attitude to migration
- Age
- Debt
- Sex and Gender

Household/family factors:

- Gender roles and dynamics within the family
- Socio-economic status
- Debt
- Family history
- Patterns of parent and child interactions

Community factors:

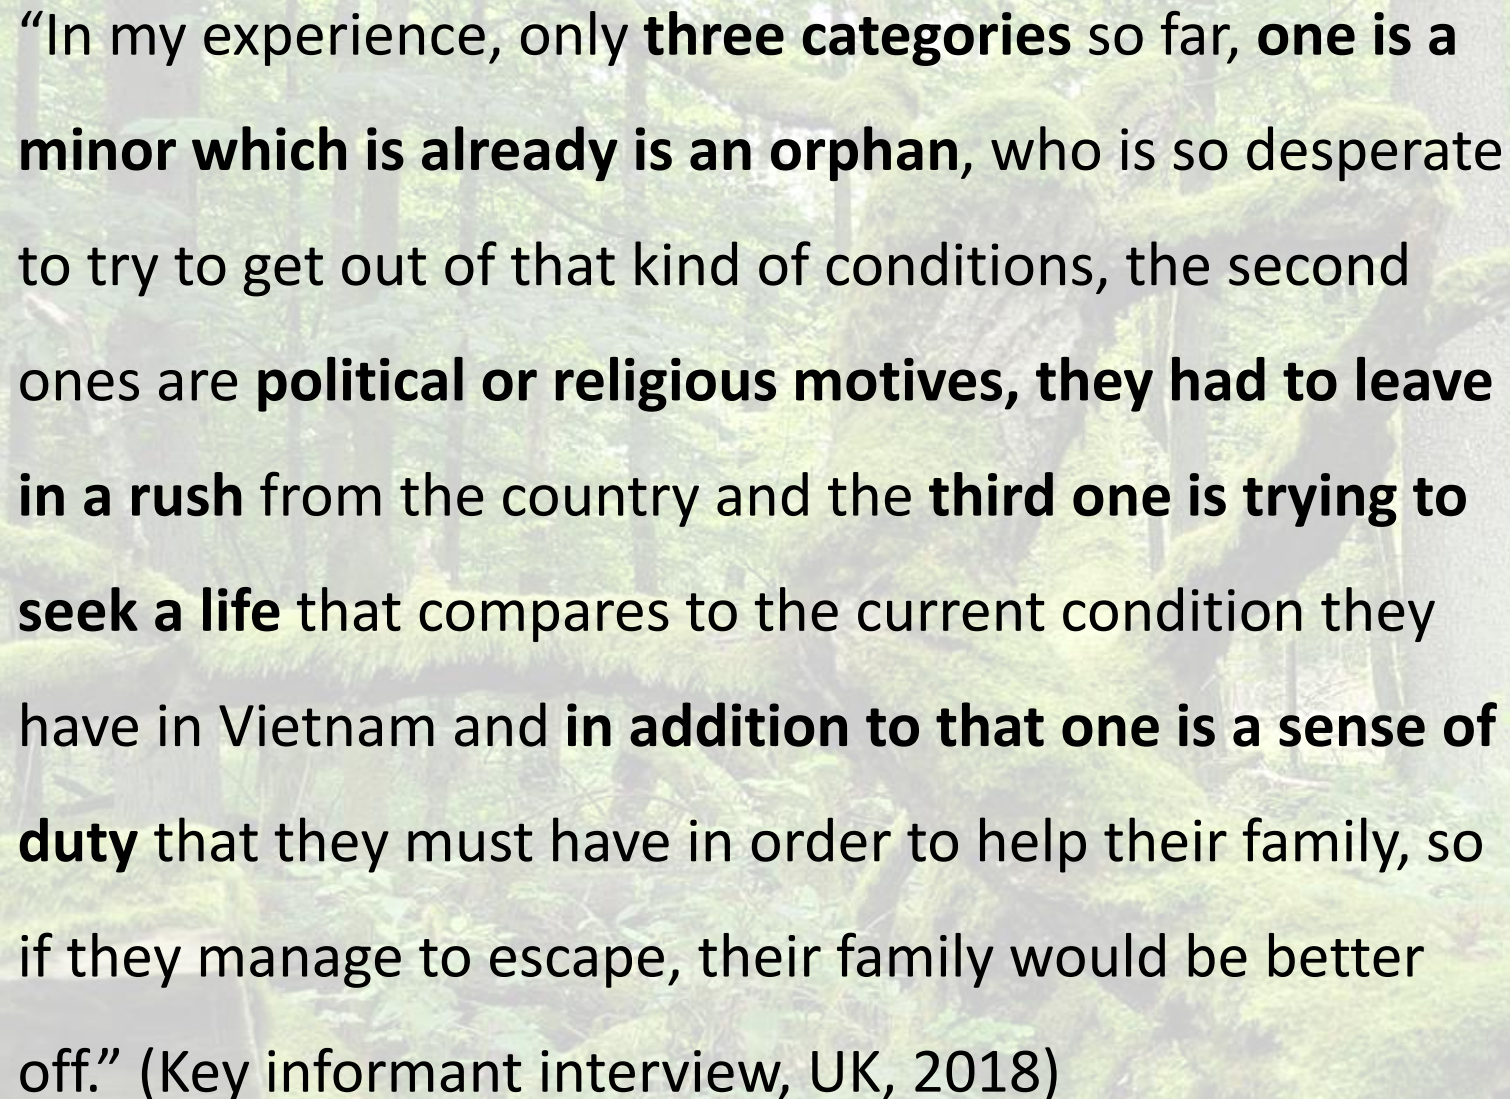

- Community beliefs and practices
- Livelihoods and employment opportunities
- Migration history and practices
- Social networks

The determinants of migrant vulnerability

Past Research – “Between Two Fires”

‘Then he started saying things like “I can help you I can take you to Italy”... I thought I would get out of the slavery I was in, I thought I was a slave. My mum treated me badly, her husband worse, I was between two fires. For one-month things went well. Then after a month he started introducing me [to] his friends, friends he used to drink with ...’

- Resisting ‘vulnerability’ and attempts to resolve own circumstances but encounter structural and exploitative circumstances that then render them ‘vulnerable’
- Socio-economic and political conditions within countries of origin and the back stories of those arriving remain largely untold

“In my experience, only three categories so far, one is a minor which is already is an orphan, who is so desperate to try to get out of that kind of conditions, the second ones are political or religious motives, they had to leave in a rush from the country and the third one is trying to seek a life that compares to the current condition they have in Vietnam and in addition to that one is a sense of duty that they must have in order to help their family, so if they manage to escape, their family would be better off.” (Key informant interview, UK, 2018)

A photograph of a forest scene. In the foreground, a large, gnarled tree trunk is heavily covered in bright green moss. The trunk curves from the left towards the right. The background is filled with many thin, vertical tree trunks and a dense canopy of green leaves, creating a soft, dappled light effect. The overall atmosphere is serene and natural.

“They trust the people who told them, not the system, they don’t like it but they have no choice, but they’re not trusting that system.”

UK Context

Modern Slavery in the UK

Modern slavery is an umbrella term that encompasses human trafficking, slavery, servitude and forced or compulsory labour.

UK estimates vary between
17,000-136,000

Definition of Trafficking

The Palermo Protocol, 2000

“The recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of persons, by means of the threat or use of force or other forms of coercion, of abduction, of fraud, of deception, of the abuse of power or of a position of vulnerability or of the giving or receiving of payments or benefits to achieve the consent of a person having control over another person, for the purpose of exploitation...”

Action – Means – Purpose

Our definition of trafficking expands as the modus operandi of trafficking evolves and adapts (Thomson, 2017).

Human Trafficking and Human Smuggling - Similarities

Involve movement from one place to another

Defined as a punishable offence

May involve transnational organised criminal groups

	Trafficking	Smuggling
Offence type	Against an individual – violation of a person’s freedom	Against the state – violation of state sovereignty
Borders	Can be across borders or within	Always across borders
Interaction of those involved	Exploitative	Smuggler as a ‘service provider’
Length of interaction	Ongoing beyond the movement	Short term- just about the movement across a border
Exploitation	Always present at some point	Not an element
Consent	Irrelevant for children	Consent given
Victim status	Considered victims of crime, should not be punished (or deported) and should be protected from further harm	Not considered victims of crime but in some way complicit and may be punished and deported without further protection

Vulnerabilities and risk factors

Numbers of children receiving a positive RG decision in 2023:

- UK born = 93%
- non-UK born = 54%

Source: IOM, 2024

Graph 5: Percentage of positive RG decisions for UK and foreign national child cases per year 2014-2023

But....

Graph 5 shows an even greater difference in the proportion of positive decisions for child cases for UK and foreign nationals. Whereas only 54% of foreign national child cases received a positive RG decision, 93% of UK child cases did. The decision making for UK child cases in 2023 did not fall from the recent trend of 9 out of 10 positive cases.
